Solo Team: Binary/ER · Godot 4 (HTML5/WebGL) · Themes: Light · Twist · Comic · ~16 min gameplay

Game Concept

A person's entire life unfolds as a continuous obstacle stream. Facing joy? Facing devastation? NO!! You have to Face it all. At the end — you rest. Lighter than you've ever been.

The player navigates a horizontally-scrolling obstacle course through 6 chapters of a person's life — alternating between Happy and Devastating situations. The world's art style, music, and difficulty shift dramatically between modes.

Themes & Expression

Theme	How It's Expressed
Light	Character feels lighter after each devastating situation. Ending = final lightness (death/release)
Twist	Gameplay twists between two extreme life situations — easy & chill vs hard & tense
Comic	Two comic art styles: happy = silly, cute ↔ devastating = gritty, tense

How the Game Ends

Outcome	Condition	End Screen
✓ You Faced It	Survive all 6 chapters	"You faced it. All of it." — rests peacefully
✗ Couldn't Face It	HP hits 0	"You just were not able to face it." — restart

🔧 Note: The final in-game artwork will resemble the images shown below but may or may not be exact. These are concept mockups to convey the visual direction, scene composition, and gameplay layout for each chapter.

The Ending

After surviving all 6 chapters, the screen fades to a dark tone:

"You were born. You fell. You rose. You loved. You lost."
"You faced it. All of it."

The character is shown as an old man, lying peacefully and passing away gently — finally free from the dualities of life.
